

5 QUESTIONS YOU MIGHT ASK YOURSELF BEFORE REMODELING YOUR BATH & KITCHEN

Embarking on a bathroom or kitchen remodel is an exciting journey that can significantly enhance both the functionality and appeal of your home. However, without the proper groundwork, this process can easily exceed your budget and lead to unplanned complications.

After years of experience with successful remodeling projects, and after understanding the intricacies of such projects, we have compiled this small guide of things to consider before embarking on a remodeling journey so that you can make an informed decision and avoid common pitfalls.

Remodeling isn't just about aesthetics, but also about making strategic decisions that align with your objectives, budget, and lifestyle needs. Take some time to address these questions so you can achieve your vision without compromising quality or finances!

Dive into our guide and discover how planning and expert insights can transform your remodeling experience.

WHAT IS THE REASON TO RENOVATE ?

This is the first step before any remodeling job, spending some time on this question will give you clarity in the aspects that you consider most important to change with the remodeling, so you will be more attentive to the details and you will define the specific resources that you allocate to each of the elements you want to install.

When the idea of remodeling is born, it is normal to think things like:

“This will last a little longer”, “Remodeling is very expensive” or “I would like to remodel, but I don't have time for that”.

Uncertainty puts a brake on the plans you have in mind, added to economic factors or limitations that you set for yourself.

2

WHAT IS THE DESIGN STYLE YOU LIKE THE MOST TO REMODEL YOUR SPACE

Being clear about your tastes and design style that you want for your new room is important to objectively purchase materials, accessories, furniture, sanitary appliances and decorations, ensuring that they combine with each other and not making extra purchases.

From rustic, to classy, minimalistic, or industrial, there are many ways in which you can imagine your new space. We suggest you organize your ideas in a digital mooboard with various visual references of kitchens and bathrooms that you like, along with important information like materials or sketches. This way it will be much easier to re-imagine your new space before you start working on it.

WHAT PERMITS ARE NEEDED BEFORE AND DURING?

3

Generally, when it comes to partial remodeling where the spatial distribution does not change, there is no demolition, movement of walls or extensions, it is not necessary to process licenses and permits with a special entity since these are activities to change finishes.

However, if you live in a residential complex or building, it is important to notify the administration to determine working hours and other details like demolitions, and debris removal.

If you live in a residential complex, make sure to notify your administration about your remodeling plans, so that they can inform you about rules to follow, working hours, and how to avoid causing disturbances to neighbors.

4

WHAT IS THE STATE OF THE FACILITIES PRIOR TO THE WORKS?

It is essential to verify the condition of the internal pipes and drains of the bathroom or kitchen, this will define the type of remodeling that will be done: superficial, in which the main focus is changing finishes and accessories, or if it has to be a bit more in-depth, focused on civil activities.

Making note of the state of your kitchen or bathroom before you start remodeling will also help you monitor the changes done to your space, and figure out if part of the budget needs to go to perfecting the foundation before the job gets done, or if you can get started with what you have.

5

WHAT TYPE OF REMODEL ARE YOU LOOKING FOR?

This must be considered so that a bathroom or kitchen is not alien to the rest of the house. This is how spaces are harmonized by defining the intended style.

Define if you are ready to remodel your bathroom or kitchen from the ground up, or if you want to salvage some of the foundation that you already have within your home. The development of new construction materials is a constant in this industry; the market offers materials that avoid the demolition of existing ceramic tiles to install new ones on top of them, creating a transition layer between them for example.
